“ A few weeks ago, I visited with aunt Ann before I had my kidney surgery. I was nervous and apprehensive and she helped ease my mind by saying, a lot of people can live with one kidney, you will be fine. I brought her some gifts and one of them was a butterfly ring that she put on her finger and we both laughed about it. She asked if it was Christmas already. We talked about family members that had passed on, then talked like two girls who found humor in much of our lives, and giggled like two school girls.
She is now with her sister Jean (my mother) and her daughter, Peggy. We shared life together, with its ups and downs and one day we will all be together in a better place. See you on the other side... love you much... Jill Ann Webb
